

EDITOR'S NOTE

Greetings! Welcome to Volume 59 of the Federal Communications Law Journal. As the official law journal of the Federal Communications Bar Association, we strive to be the nation's premier communications law journal. This Issue provides timely and insightful analysis of communications law issues that are making headlines across the country. The Authors bring a variety of experiences, and we hope their Articles will make a lasting contribution to the discussion of these issues.

On December 8, 2006, the Mercatus Center at George Mason University sponsored a symposium entitled "The Crisis in Public Safety Communications." Public safety communications has recently become a priority for the Federal Communications Commission, and in response we decided to add the pieces produced for the symposium to this Issue. We are honored to have four distinguished Authors contribute to our Journal on such an important topic. Jerry Brito is a Senior Research Fellow in the Regulatory Studies Program at the Mercatus Center. Gerald R. Faulhaber is a Professor of Business and Public Policy at the Wharton School and Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Jon M. Peha is the Associate Director of the Center for Wireless and Broadband Networking and Professor of Electrical Engineering and Public Policy at Carnegie Mellon University. Philip J. Weiser is a Professor of Law and Telecommunications at the University of Colorado.

Network Neutrality has become one of the most contentious issues in telecommunications. In order to remain at the forefront of this issue, we are publishing excerpts from an online debate between Tim Wu and Chris Yoo, two experts on the topic and respected scholars in their own right. This represents a departure from our customary publishing standards in both form and substance. However, because of the Authors' strong reputations and generous contribution we relaxed our standard procedures. We hope this gives our subscribers the opportunity to fully understand this important issue. Tim Wu is a Professor of Law at Columbia University. Chris Yoo is a Professor of Law and the Director of the Technology and Entertainment Law Program at the Vanderbilt University Law School.

Tatum Lytle wrote our Note for Issue 3. Her Note focuses on the First Amendment rights of soldiers. She concludes that there should be a more cohesive balance between these rights and protecting national security interests. Ms. Lytle received her J.D. from Indiana University School of Law-Bloomington in May 2007. Finally, Deborah J. Salons reviews Who Controls the Internet? Illusions of a Borderless World. Ms. Salons is an Associate at Drinker Biddle & Reath LLP in Washington, D.C.

It has been a great honor to serve the FCBA and Indiana University over the past year. I would like to reserve this space to thank the incredible staff of the Federal Communications Law Journal and our advisor Professor Joshua Fairfield. I would also like to thank the Journal Committee of the Federal Communications Bar Association. It has been a pleasure working with them. Finally, warmest appreciation and regards to the Authors for their contributions and cooperation throughout the editorial process.

Please direct all Article inquiries to Volume 60 Senior Articles Editor, Holly Johnson, and all other Volume 60 inquiries to Matt Lawless, Editor-in-Chief. The Journal can be contacted at Indiana University–Bloomington School of Law, 211 South Indiana Avenue, Bloomington, Indiana 47405; telephone (812) 855-5952; and facsimile (812) 855-5871. Inquiries can be emailed to fcj@indiana.edu. Further information and easier access to the Articles can be obtained from our Web site, www.law.indiana.edu/fcj.

Casey M. Holsapple
Editor-in-Chief, Volume 59